Deaths of Past Week in Calloway and of Well Known Citizens in Neighboring Counties.

One of the saddest deaths that has occurred in Calloway for quite a while was that of Miss Alberta Caldwell Dabney, daughter of Judge John C. Dabney, who answered the death call at the home of her father here last Saturday night. For the past year she had been in very bad health, and for the past four or five months she had been confined to her room with tuberculosis.

Miss Alberta was the oldest daughter of Judge Dabney by his last wife, and since the death of her mother in November, 1915, has had full charge of the household affairs for her father, and had been a mother to her smaller sister, Jane, who is now about nine years of age. —Caldwell Record.

On Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in Cottage Grove, Mrs. Mat Williams died of paralysis at the age of 73 years. She was an upright Christian lady and was said to be the last charter member of the Methodist church of that city. The remains were interred on Monday after services at the church by Rev. C. A. Waterfield. She is survived by three sons, Robert and Thomas of Cottage Grove and Will of Jackson; and two daughters, Mrs. Belle Bowden and Mrs. Dora Suter of Murray. —Ky. —Paris Post-Intelligencer.

Mrs. James McDaniel died at her home in south Benton Tuesday morning, after a lingering illness of Bright's disease.

She leaves a heart broken husband, one son, R. L. McDaniel; one daughter, Mrs. Dupree, besides a host of other relatives and friends to mourn her sad death.

The remains were carried to Hardin Wednesday where a large concourse of old friends gathered to pay the last sad rites to the departed. —Benton Tribune-Democrat.

Mrs. Sallie Vancleave, aged about 78 years, died last Friday in this city at the home of her grand daughter, Mrs. Will Jordan. She was stricken some several days ago with pneumonia, and owing to her advanced age and feeble condition soon succumbed to the disease. She was one of the most widely known and esteemed aged ladies of the county and is survived by many relatives and friends. The burial took place Saturday in the Beech Grove grave yard.

Mrs. Bodie Cathey, a well known and popular lady of this city, died last Friday night after a brief illness of pneumonia and pleurisy. She had only been ill a very short time and her death was a severe shock to the family and relatives. A husband and three children, besides many other relatives survive her.

Mr. Nicholas Cunningham, one of the oldest citizens of this county, died last Saturday afternoon at his home in Golden Pond, twelve miles west of here after being in feeble health for quite a while of the infirmities of old age. —Caldwell Record.

Mrs. Wm. Pool, an esteemed lady of the Stone's school house section of the county, died Wednesday morning of this week at about 7 o'clock of heart trouble.

She was about 65 years of age and was a sister of F. C. and Lowery Allen. The burial took place at the Old Salem grave yard Thursday morning.

"In the Midst of Life"

(The following editorial-sermon is reproduced from the St. Louis Republic of recent date. It was inspired by the loss of the Missouri Athletic Club building by fire recently, and in which quite a number of splendid citizens of that western metropolis lost their lives.)

"In the midst of life we are in death." When the matches of the Book of Common Prayer are being molded the world was never free from the smoke of battle and the clash of swords; there was fighting to the death in the streets of every large city; all merchant ships carried guns, for piracy was part of the recognized business of the high seas; epidemic diseases scourges that men knew not how to evade or avert; adventures sailed to unknown lands and were never heard of more. The chance of death was part of the ordinary life consciousness of every man; the songs of the very streets told of men marching to the grave with banner and bugle for honor that cannot die; the great Lord built his tomb with as much care as he built his palace. And so, as a matter of course, the worshiper recognized the familiar presence of death in life.

We have laid the sword up to rust. We have made the seas as safe as the cities, and the cities as safe as the homes of a century ago; we have tamed the whole world and done away with the unknown. We have learned how to drive away the pestilence. And men forget death. They have ceased to sing about him. He steals on the old by degrees, but the young, the strong, the enthusiastic give no thought to him. And still the old truth abides.

Just now it comes home with resistless power to St. Louis. A structure that was the home of an organization whose very name suggests the surplus strength of splendid youth is a ragged ruin. And a score or more of men—chosen from among our best and strongest—have found their graves in it. They went to their beds after a day of rest, of quiet cheer and good fellowship. They had no suspicion that their work was done. They awoke to a few moments of bewilderment and terror; and then—they went out. Our eyes cannot follow them. But already their work, their words, their influence have taken on the character of completeness. All is finished.

Their example comes to us with a new force. To those of us who knew them there has never been an hour when the quality of their thoughts, their effort, their friendship stood out as saliently as now. As we speak of them they seem to stand beside us. All that they were, all that they strove for, appeals mightily to us. And this depends, in a strange degree, on the sudden manner of their taking off. They have passed into death, not by fading as a leaf, but with full hands and leaping hearts, out of the midst of life.

We, in this age, heir to all preceding ages, know many things. We know just how and how much the steel building bends before the roaring gale. We have measured the flood of the Great River. We have invaded the heights and the depths. But before the great mystery that lies beyond the end of life we stand as men stood in the dawn of time. We walk by faith. We reach out to the immutable things beyond the grave by the sheer strength of belief. We cannot attain to them. The chambers of our minds are too narrow for eternal verities to turn round in. The channels of our thoughts are too shallow to float the leviathan vessels of eternity."

These friends of ours have rendered us a double service. Their lives cut off at their height, their memories will live with us in immortal youth. They will stand to us as those whose hands never knew weakness, nor their powers decay. And along with immortal youthfulness which death has conferred upon them is a message from the heights. But yesterday they slept among the towering structures of one of the great cities of the world. Today they are where there is no architecture save that not made with hands! —St. Louis Republic

Big Hotel Burns at Eddyville.

Eddyville, Ky., April 7.—The Hotel Gaines was destroyed by fire here this morning. The loss is about $10,000 with $4,500 insurance. The building was erected several years ago by W. T. Gaines and Senator S. R. Glenn, and was one of the most substantial in this little city. It was owned by C. J. Gresham and was under lease to C. L. Harper. Mr. Harper died Sunday and was buried Sunday. His widow lost practically all her personality.

A number of other buildings were set on fire by embers from the burning hotel, but by close watch and hard work were extinguished with no loss.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is a result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's catarrh cure. Send for circular, free.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH ACTIVE

The duchess of Marlborough in an interview in London the other day on the subject of the Women's Municipal party, of which she is the president, said:

"That women have for so long held aloof from the active exercise of the vote in local government is due to the fact that they do not realize the value of political unity. Now the St. Mary-lebone Women's Local Government association has been the means of showing us what vigor women can bring into the political life of London. For a start at their next meeting on March 27 a basis will be drawn up on which our work will be founded. From the women who sign we shall pick the cleanest and most ready spirits as the women's party candidates for the next borough council and London county council elections. They will be pledged to a program of progressive social legislation. They will not seek votes on the catch words of either of the men's municipal parties, but will let the voters see plainly what they stand for."

"We want to form a party at municipal elections which will have the same political effect as the entry of a labor party candidate at parliamentary elections. We aim at supplying the need of a central electoral machine which in conjunction with other local government associations will produce a party of women so strong that it can approach party agents before a vacancy is declared and insist that a suitable woman-candidate shall run on party lines."

MRS. SHAFROTH A STUDENT

"If I could, I should like to go to college always," said Mrs. John F. Shafroth, wife of the senator from Colorado, in Washington the other day. "This reminds me of a story I once heard about a man who was left a legacy with an income to be paid as long as he should continue to remain in college. The story went on to say that at the age of eighty the man was still in college."

"Now, I have no such ulterior motive as that, but I love teachers and all that pertains to study. I should count it the greatest joy if I had time to take a college course every year."

All of which brings one abruptly to a consideration of the question why our western women have such active and alert mentalities. Is it because the climate of the West is intensely invigorating, and therefore stimulating of mind as well as body, or is it that the inheritance of a pioneer tenacity from their mothers and grandmothers has induced a desire not to be denied once it fixes itself upon a certain aim?

In any case, the fact remains that western women have a mental intensity and vivacity not exceeded by that of the women of any other part of the country.

Mrs. Shafroth is a shining example in this respect of western woman-kind. She is intellectual as well as clever. She is acquainted with her country's progress from the political as well as the artistic standpoint, and her viewpoint is comprehensive because she is a student.

She was graduated from Howard college, Missouri, her home state. But her student days by no means came to an end when she left college. Rather, then commenced a period of more thoughtful study than she had undertaken before.

BUYS DUKE'S RARE VOLUMES?

According to a London cablegram Henry Edwards Huntington, an American millionaire, has purchased the great library of the duke of Devonshire. The library contains many rare volumes, and it is said the purchase price exceeds $1,000,000.

The Chatsworth library, consisting of the Claxtons and Kemble collection of plays, are part of the collection. The British museum was anxious to obtain the rare editions, but was obliged to retire from the contest owing to the lack of funds, according to the report.

Included in the purchase, are 27 Claxtons, a score of Shakespeare quartos, plays by Ben Jonson, Marlowe, and other Elizabethans. The collection was sold by Kemble to the sixth duke of Devonshire for $10,000. It is said that in order to avoid adverse public opinion the books were shipped out of the country secretly.

Mr. Huntington was born in Oneonta, N. Y., February 27, 1850, and began business life in the hardware trade in his native town. His fortune, however, was made in the railroad construction business. His first venture in this line was made in 1880.

AMERICAN GIRL IN HIGH POSITION

Another American woman of distinguished family, Mme. Grouitch, will soon do her share in carrying American civilization to the Balkans, when she goes to Belgrade, where her husband has been appointed secretary of foreign affairs. She is now in America on a flying visit. She is well known in exclusive society circles of New York, Chicago, Washington and other large cities.

Mme. Grouitch, who was formerly Miss Gordon of Virginia, met her husband at Athens when both were students there. After they had married he rose to be Serbian minister to England, and with him she played an important part in the high social circles of the British metropolis and Paris.

She did notable work for the wounded of her adopted country during the Balkan war, and made a tour of America in the interests of the wounded soldiers. Later she went to Hungary to work in the hospitals. King Peter and the two young princesses are delighted that she is to live in their capital. The two young men, brought up without a mother, owe much to Mme. Grouitch, who acted as a social mentor during their several years in England.

WINS THROUGH TACT

President Wilson's "Domination" Over Congress.

Simple Fact Is That the Chief Executive Is a Far Greater Statesman Than either of His Two Predecessors in Office.

Persons who are unable to understand how President Wilson manages to get what he wants out of congress should study the Jones episode.

The senator from Washington had declared that the president's Panama tolls message was the result of "a bargain with England." In the Roosevelt days a statement would have been issued at once from the White House characterizing Senator Jones' charge as "a deliberate and unqualified falsehood." Incidentally Mr. Roosevelt in private conversation would have applied an assortment of selected epithets to the Washington senator and taken pains to see that these epithets found their way into the newspapers.

Mr. Wilson pursued quite a different policy. Senator Jones was invited to the White House, where the president demonstrated to him that the charge was unfounded and that he was skating "on very thin ice." Then the senator returned to the senate and apologized. Thus a very dangerous misstatement was corrected by its responsible author without humiliation and without any members of congress complaining of the president's domination, but if he dominates it is certainly not by executive power or executive coercion or executive usurpation. No president ever treated the legislative branch of the government with more scrupulous respect.

Mr. Wilson would be incapable of voicing the Cleveland snarl that he "had congress on his hands." Nor has he ever undertaken to bulldoze and browbeat it in the Roosevelt fashion. There is no report of a single unkind or uncompromising remark that he has ever made in public or in private against any member of the house or senate.

Mr. Taft undertook to punish recalcitrant members of congress by withholding patronage. Mr. Wilson has avoided that blunder, too.

To carry out such a policy requires infinite tact and self-restraint. It is easy to understand how the president should at times feel "like a bird from a far from extinct volcano," but the lava has never spilled over. The president's success in dealing with congress is a striking example of the power of self-restraint. This is as it should be. Under free institutions the only man fit to govern is the man who can govern himself.—New York World.

Blow Hot and Blow Cold.

In Kansas the demoralized Republicans are trying to excite the farmers, who, according to their own boasts, are the most prosperous in the United States, by pointing out how the terrible Democrats are seeking to ruin them by allowing the free importation of food, says the Philadelphia Record. Here in the East the same brand of patriots abuse the farmers for their high prices and aim to inflame the city workers by harrowing tales of the awful havoc wrought by bringing in raw materials free. In both sections of the country the result seems to be the same—absolutely nil. After the many sorrows of bleeding Kansas it is pleasant to know that her farmers are now so opulent that they all ride in motor cars, but it will be hard to convince the people of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other manufacturing states that the tariff bars should be kept high that these same thrifty agriculturists may accumulate still more wealth. The Democratic tariff aims at a fair deal for all, and the people show a growing appreciation of the fact.

Putting the Matter Openly.

If the demagogues of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty are moved by the desire to grant subsidies let them declare so openly, and not prate about the impairment of American sovereignty to conceal their unwillingness to bear a just share of the national burdens. Leaving aside the consideration of all international obligations, and regarding the matter of tolls for coastwise shipping merely as regulation of domestic commerce, let the interested citizens, who favor exemptions, ask themselves the question: "Is the cordoned trust which controls the coastal steamship lines entitled to this favor?" We have no doubt what the answer will be. Exchange.

Woodrow Wilson's Power.

Woodrow Wilson's power appears to depend on two things: The first is popular confidence in his sincerity; the second is popular confidence that he knows where to look for the way out of difficulties.—St. Louis Republic.

Bank Clearings Tell Tale.

Last week's bank clearings, as compiled by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, exceeded those of the corresponding period of 1913 by 2.7 per cent, says the Philadelphia Record of March 22. Inasmuch as the spring of last year was one of great business activity, it seems clear that at the present time trade is not entirely dead, as the Q. Q. P. calamity howlers would lead us to infer. As barometers of business conditions, the bank clearings are much more reliable than the utterances of politicians.

HERON HAS FAULTS

Will Ruthlessly Murder Young Moorhens or Mallards.

Bird That Has Figured in Many Historical Incidents of the Past and of Whom Many Fables Are Told.

Lewistown, England.—Much is to be said in favor of the heron, but he has his faults, for he will ruthlessly murder young moorhens or mallards, which are not his legitimate prey. He will carry this practice to the extent of actually swimming out into deep water to catch the young birds, and these when caught are swallowed whole, in the same manner as he would treat a fish, for the heron, like the hawk and owl, disgorges the indigestible portions of his food in the form of pellets. My two herons joined forces one day and between them speared a young mallard to death, aged about six weeks, and as it was too large to swallow whole, and not knowing apparently how to tear it to pieces, they were quite unable to eat it. When about three months old they could swallow whole a one-pound fish, a truly remarkable performance when one considers that a full-grown heron only weighs about three pounds! Fish of any size had to be swallowed head first, and I found that anything, such as a piece of meat, not wedge shaped, caused them considerable trouble, even though of no great size; fish also were not easily swallowed unless previously dipped in water to further their sliding propensities. Herons are said to be long-lived, but owing to their fabled tendencies towards murder I had to give mine away, so I had no chance of testing the accuracy of that statement, though I must say I can well believe it, as they seem to be extraordinarily hardy birds.

The heron was a bird that figured largely in past days, and many are the fables quoted about him, one of the strangest being perhaps the following: It was said that if you were to rub the fat from the thigh of a heron on to your bait you insured yourself a good day's fishing, for the scent from its legs was supposed to attract the fish and thus enable him to catch his prey more easily!

If you wish to tame a young heron successfully it should be kept apart from other birds, at any rate from those smaller than himself, or he will quickly become domineering and quarrelsome; also in a place where he can be often handled and see plenty of people, otherwise he will soon become shy and wild, for, unlike the wild goose or raven, which when wild are his equals in wildness and cunning but once tamed remain tame, given the ordinary attention, herons seem to show little or no affection for their owners, but, however, quickly distinguish him from a stranger.

In conclusion, I think the heron with careful handling has great possibilities as a pet—and when I say pet I do not mean merely a pained bird, testless in captivity, but a bird which will stay with you unflinchingly and of his own free will. Why should not some enterprising person attempt to train the heron to fish for his master, like the cormorants of the Chinese? In any case, put him where you will, he will always be one of the most ornamental of birds, be it in pond, garden or lawn, and none is easier to feed and keep in health.

Curfew Law in New York Town.

Pathogue, N. Y.—Curfew law prevails here. In the winter, children under ten must be home by seven o'clock; those under fifteen at eight. In the summer the limit is moved up an hour and a half in each case.

Is Champion Dog Catcher.

Hackensack, N. J.—Joseph Dalle, twenty-three, has been hailed as New Jersey's champion dog catcher. He has caught and asphyxiated 1,025 canines.

Laborer Held to Fortune.

Chicago.—John Reese, a laborer, received a cablegram from his old home in Bohemia notifying him that he was the sole heir to an estate worth $100,000.

Ancient Stage to Be Used.

A more than usually interesting dramatic revival is announced for April 16, when the "Agamemnon" of Aeschylus will be performed in the ancient Greek theater of Syracuse.

Nearly 24 centuries have passed since Hiero I embellished his city with the theater which tradition attributes to the architect Democor Myrtila.

Aeschylus must have taken refuge in the court of Hiero very soon after its completion, and it may be conjectured that the great trilogy, which began with the "Agamemnon," was often performed on its stage; it is known that the "Persae" was performed there and a work written for Hiero by Aeschylus, entitled the "Ete-neae," of which no trace remains.—New York Sun.

Alert Perception Needed.

"You say that a man who occupies a position of serious public responsibility needs a sense of humor?"

"Certainly. The more grave and dignified he assumes to be the more he needs a sense of humor. He must be able to recognize humorous things instantly, so as to avoid saying them."

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents. Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. Every man is above the average, according to his own belief.

VITAL FORCE

Disease germs are on every hand. They are in the very air we breathe. A system "run down" is a prey for them. One must have vital force to withstand them. Vital force depends on digestion—on whether or not food nourishes—on the quality of blood coursing through the body.

DR. PIERCE'S Golden Medical Discovery

Strengthens the weak stomach. Gives good digestion. Enlivens the sluggish liver. Feeds the flaccid nerves. Again full health and strength return. A general upbuilding enables the heart to pump like an engine running in oil. The vital force is once more established to full power. Year in and year out for over forty years this great health-restoring remedy has been spreading throughout the entire world—because of its ability to make the sick well and the weak strong. Don't despair of "being your old self again." Give this vegetable remedy a trial—Today—New. You will soon feel "like new again." All Local Drug Stores are Giving Away a Limited Supply of the New External Vapor Treatment

Applied Over Throat and Chest It Relieves Colds Over Night—Croup in Fifteen Minutes

Local druggists report a remarkable demand for the new vapor treatment for croup and cold troubles. Vick's Vap-O-Rub Croup and Pneumonia Salve, recently introduced here from North Carolina. This treatment is in the form of a salve that is applied over the chest and throat. The heat of the body releases the soothing antiseptic vapors of Eucalyptol Thymol, Menthol, Camphor, Pinus Sylvestris, etc., which are inhaled with every breath through the air passages direct to the lungs. At the same time Vick's is absorbed through the skin, taking out the soreness.

In croup cases the breathing is made easier in five minutes, and in fifteen minutes the worst cases are relieved. In cases of severe colds, hot wet towels are first applied to the chest and throat to open the pores of the skin. Follow this with a good application of Vick's and cover with a warm flannel cloth. The vapors inhaled all night long loosen the phlegm and open the air passages. The next morning the head is clear and soreness gone from the lungs. A number of the more enterprising druggists have made arrangements with the manufacturers by which they are allowed to give away a limited number of 25-cent packages free to their customers. If your druggist has given away all his free packages, you

INDIGESTION OVERCOME

Overcome by Simple Remedy.

Hurried and careless habits of eating, irregular meals and foods that do not harmonize, tend to weaken the digestive organs and result in different forms of stomach trouble. If you are one of the unfortunate who have drifted into this condition, eat simple foods only, slowly, regularly and take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic.

Mrs. H. J. Smith, Thomasville, Ga., says: "I suffered from a stomach trouble, was tired, worn out and nervous. A friend advised me to take Vinol. My stomach trouble soon disappeared and now I eat heartily and have a perfect digestion and I wish every tired, weak woman could have Vinol, for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good."

The recovery of Mrs. Smith was due to the combined action of the medicinal elements of the cod's livers—aided by the blood-making and strength creating properties of tonic iron, which are contained in Vinol. We will return the purchase money every time Vinol fails to benefit.

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation.

To be outside! All that light and color and comfort and pleasure would hum and sparkle on just the same, though he was no longer within the circle of its effulgence—slaving perhaps, he thought with a twisted smile, at some tawdry occupation, that called for no experience, to pay for a meal in some second-rate restaurant and a pallet in some shabby genteel hall bedroom, till his clothes were replaced by ill-fitting "hand-me-downs"—till by wretched gradations he arrived finally at the status of the dime seat in the gallery and five-cent cigars!

There was one way back. It lay through the hackneyed gateway of marriage. Youth, comeliness and fine linen, in the world he knew, were a fair exchange for wealth in any phase.

"Cute for cutie!"—the satiric phrase ran through his mind. Why not? Others did so. And as for himself, it perhaps need be no question of plain and spinster millions—there was Katharine Fargo!

In his heart John Valiant was aware, by those subtle signs which men and women alike distinguish, that while Katharine Fargo loved first and foremost her own wonderful person, he had been an easy second in her regard.

John Valiant looked down at the bulldog squatted on the floor, his eyes shining in the dimness. A little hot apple had run over him. "Not on your life, Chum!" he said. "No shameless harp!" There must be other things besides money and social position in this doddering old world, after all! We're going to begin something for ourselves, if it's only raising cabbage! And we're going to stand it without any baby-aching—the nurse never held our noses when we took our castor-oil!

It was folded down, that old bright page. Flims had been written to the rose-colored chapter. And even as he told himself, he was conscious of a new rugged something that had been slowly dawning within him, a sense of courage, even of zest, and a furious hatred of the self-pity that had wrenched him even for a moment.

He turned from the window, picked up his letters, and followed by the dog, went slowly up another flight to his room.

He tore open the letters abstractedly, by the usual dinner-card or two, a letter, a note, a memorandum, a chronicler's scribble from an exclamation mark-quarrying company, a quarterly statement of a club house-committee. The last two natives bore a nondescript look.

One was trivial, with the name of a leg of mutton in its corner. The other was a gaudy procession of postage stamps proclaiming that it had been registered.

"What's in that, I wonder?" he said to himself, and then, with a smile at the unmasculine speculation, opened the smaller envelope.

"Dear Sir," began the letter, in the most uncompromisingly conventional of typewriting.

"Enclosed please find, with title deed, a memorandum opened in your name by the late John Valiant some years before his death. It was his desire that the services indicated in connection with this estate should continue till this date. We hand you herewith our check for $238.20 (two hundred and thirty-eight dollars and twenty cents), the balance in your favor, for which please send receipt.

"And oblige.
Yours very truly,
"Emerson and Ball."
He turned to the memorandum. It showed a sizable initial deposit against which was entered a series of annual tax payments with minor disbursements credited to "inspection and care." The tax receipts were pinned to the account.

The larger wrapper contained an unsealed envelope, across which was written in faded ink and in an unfamiliar dashing, slanting handwriting, his own name. The envelope contained a creased yellow parchment, from between whose folds there clumped and fluttered down upon the floor a long flatish object wrapped in a paper, a newspaper clipping and a letter.

Puzzled he unfolded the crackling thing in his hands. "Why," he said half aloud, "it's a deed made over to me. He overran it swiftly. 'Part of an old Colony grant. . . . a plantation in Virginia, twelve hundred odd acres, given under the hand of a vice-regal governor in the sixteenth century. I had no idea titles in the United States went back so far as that!' His eye led to the end. 'It was my father's! What could he have wanted of an estate in Virginia? It must have come into his hands in the course of business.'"

He picked up the newspaper clipping. It was worn and broken in the folds as if it had been carried for months in a pocketbook.

"It will interest readers of this section of Virginia (the paragraph began) to learn, from a recent transfer received for record at the County Clerk's office, that Damory Court has passed to Mr. John Valiant, minor."

He turned the paper over and found a date: It had been printed in the year of his transfer to himself, when he was six years old—the year his father had died.

"John Valiant, minor, the son of the former owner.
"There are few indeed who do not recall the tragedy which in the public mind the estate is connected. The fact, moreover, that this old homestead has been left in its present state (for, as is well known, the house has remained with all its contents and furnishings untouched) to rest during a long term of years unoccupied, could not, of course, fail to be commented on, and this circumstance alone has perhaps tended to keep alive a melancholy story which may well be forgotten."

He read the elaborate, rather stilted phraseology in the twenty-year-old paper with a wondering interest. "An old house," he mused, "with a bad name. Probably he couldn't sell it, and maybe he would even have sold it. That would explain why it remained so long unoccupied—why there are no records of rentals. Probably the house was starved and run down."

"It's an off-set to the hall-bedroom idea, at any rate," he said to himself humorously. "It holds out an escape from the noble army of rent-payers. When my twenty-eight hundred is gone, I could live down there a landed proprietor, and by the same mark an honorary colonel, and raise the cabbage I was talking about—oh, Chum!—while you stalk rabbits. How does that strike you?"

He laughed whimsically. He, John Valiant, of New York, first-nichter at its theaters, half-fellow-well-met in its club corridors and welcome diner at any one of a hundred brilliant glass-and-silver-twinkling supper tables, entombed on the wreck of a Virginia plantation, a would-be country gentleman, on an automobile and next to nothing a year!

He bethought himself of the fallen letter and possessed himself of it quickly. It lay with the superscription side down. On it was written, in the same hand which had addressed the other envelope:

For my son, John Valiant.
When he reaches the age of twenty-five.

That, then, had been written by his father—and he had died nearly twenty years ago! He broke the seal with a strange feeling as if, walking in some familiar thoroughfare, he had stumbled on a lichen and a sunken tombstone.

"When you read this, my son, you will have come to man's estate. It is curious to think that this black, black ink may be faded to gray and this white, white paper yellowed, just from lying waiting so long. But strangest of all is to think that you yourself whose brown head happily tops this desk, will be as tall (I hope), as I! How I wonder what you will look like then!—And shall I—the real, real—I mean—be peering over your strong broad shoulder as you read? Who knows? Wise men have dreamed such a thing possible—and I am not a bit wiser."

"John, you will not have forgotten that you are a Valiant. But you are also a Virginian. Will you have discovered this for yourself? Here is the deed to the land where I and my father, and his father, and many, many more Valiants before them were born. Sometime, perhaps, you will know why you are John Valiant of New York instead of John Valiant of Damory Court. I can not tell you myself, because it is too true a story, and I have forgotten how to tell any but fairy tales, where everything happens right. Princes and they live happily together ever after."

After a time Valiant thrust the key into his pocket, and rising, went to a trunk that lay against the wall. Searching in a portfolio, he took out a small old-fashioned photograph, much battered and soiled. It had been cut from a larger group and the name of the photographer had been traced from the back. He set it upright on the desk, and bending forward, looked long at the face it disclosed. It was the only picture he had ever possessed of his father.

He turned and looked into the glass above the dresser. The features were the same, eyes, brow, lips, and strong waving hair. But for its time-stained photograph might have been one of himself, taken yesterday.

CHAPTER V.
On the Red Road.
The green, mid-May Virginia afternoon was arched with a sky as blue as the tiles of the Temple of Heaven and steeped in a wash of sunlight as yellow as gold. Nothing in all the springy landscape but looked warm and opalescent and inviting—except a tawny bull that from across a barred fence cornered a tractor-tail in silence and glowered sullenly at the big motor halted motionless at the side of the twisting road.

Curled worm-like in the driver's seat, with his chin on his knees, John Valiant sat with his eyes upon the distance. For an hour he had whirled through that wondrous shimmer of color with a flapping lettering breeze in his face, sweet from the crimson clover that poured and rooted over the roadside.

"Chum, old man," said Valiant, with his arm about the bulldog's neck, "if those color-photograph chaps had shown us this, we simply wouldn't have believed it, would we? Such scenery! The roads we're used to, what? He wound his strong fingers in a choking grip in the scruff of the white neck, as a chipmunk chattered by on the low stone wall. "No, you don't you can't! He's a jolly little beggar, and he doesn't deserve being eaten!"

He filled his briar-wood pipe and drew in great breaths of the fragrant incense. "What a pity you don't smoke, Chum; you miss such a lot!" After a time he shook himself and knocked the red core from the pipe-bowl against his boot-heel. "I hate to start," he confessed, half to the dog and half to himself. "To leave anything so cheerily beautiful as this! Head over heels with the world, by the road map the village can't be far now. So long, Mr. Bull!"

He clutched the self-starter. But there was only a protestant wheeze; the car declined to budge. Climbing down, he cranked vigorously. The motor turned over with a surly grunt of remonstrance and after a tentative throb-throb, coughed and stopped dead. Something was wrong. With a sigh he flung off his tweed jacket, donned a smudgy "bumper," opened his toolbox, and, with a glance at his wrist-watch which told him it was three o'clock, threw up the monster's hood and went bitterly to work.

At half past three the investigation had got as far as the lubricator. At four o'clock the bulldog had given it up and gone nosing ahead. At half past four John Valiant lay flat on his back, like some disreputable stevedore, alternately tinkering with refractory valves and cursing the obdurate mechanism. A sharp stone, gnawed frequently into the small of his back and just as he made a final vicious lunge, something gave way and a prickling red-hot stab of pain shot zig-zagging from his smitten crazy-bone.

He looked back momentarily. "He—he always follows people he likes, you see—"

"Thank you," she said. The tone was a hint—small, yet perceptible—of aloofness. "I'm not in the least afraid of dogs." And with a little nod, she swung briskly on up the Red Road.

John Valiant stood staring after her till she had passed from view around a curve. "Oh, glory!" he muttered. "To begin by shaking your fist at her and end by making her wonder if you aren't trying to be fresh? You poor, profane, floundering idiot!"

Wood is Made Fireproof.

It is said that the Metropolitan railway has fireproofed all its rolling stock, without the elimination of woodwork and the structural and decorative advantages which woodwork affords. The method of fireproofing is the same as that now being employed by the admiralty. This consists of the impregnation of the pores and fibers of the wood with chemicals such as render the wood absolutely flameproof. Wood so treated is said to lose none of its natural characteristics, and has no harmful effect upon glass, metals, varnishes or metal fittings with which it may be brought into contact.

One of the colors of the 1st Northamptonshire regiment, which had been carried right through the peninsula, was discovered some years ago in a pawn broker's shop, though how it got there is a mystery to this day. A similar uncertainty attaches to a pair of old colors of the 2d Border regiment, which were recovered from a London pawn broker, who was offering them for sale, by Lord Archibald Campbell in 1888.

Four years later four colors which had accompanied the Gloucester regiment in Egypt and in the peninsula were recovered from a York pawn broker. It appeared that having been bequeathed by an old colonel of the regiment to his son, they were ultimately secured by a servant, who, falling on evil times, pawned them for a few shillings.

At Bergen-on-Zoom the Royal Scots, to drive their precious colors from falling into French hands, sank them deep in the river, though the enemy later fished them out, and when the second battalion of the 8th foot was disbanded at Portsmouth in 1816 the colors were put into small pieces and distributed among the officers.

UNREASONABLE THING TO ASK
Thirsty Tourists Inclined to Be Fickle Should Visit Ireland During the Winter Months.

Two New York men were touring Ireland last summer by automobile. On a hot July afternoon they came to an inn. Stopping, they went into the bar. A red-cheeked, peasant girl was the barmaid. The travelers ordered Irish and soda. The girl served them and went on with her interrupted work of wiping the bar. One of the men tasted his drink and found it tepid.

"I say, my girl," he said, "won't you please put some ice in these drinks?"
Her mouth went wide open and the mopping cloth was poised in mid-air. Amaze held her silent for a moment. Then she found tongue in a hurry.

"Ice, is it? And who the—ever heard of ice in July?"
Whereupon she fell to polishing again.

The Vision of the Child

By S. E. KISER

Is the hope He gave us dying? Has our wisdom brought us doubt? Is the world a world of scoffers? Has the lamp of love gone out? Has He ceased to be the Savior? Is He but a fading wraith? Is Gethsemane an idyl that no longer rouses faith?

Hark! Hear the bells ring out—behold the cross upon the hill! Once more the stones are red by which His weary feet were prest; Doubt yesterday was master, but today there rises still

The vision of the Little Child upon His mother's breast.

We decline to reach for shadows, and we pity them that grope

Where no substances are present, blindly holding fast to hope;

Can the newer, wider knowledge we possess be satisfied With a faith that spread in darkness? Have we swept the myth aside?

Hark! Hear the bells ring out again; once more the anthems thrill,

The faith we turned from yesterday is lovingly confessed, For, though our knowledge may be great, before us rises still

The vision of the Little Child upon His mother's breast.

The Garden at Nazareth

Years Have Dealt Lightly With Spot Where Mary Was for a Time Happy With Her Infant Son

THE garden at Nazareth covers a hillside slope with flowers. It lies under a sky so pale from oriental heat that its blue is delicately tinted white. This garden, where Mary and the infant Jesus were happy long ago, is now little different in appearance from what it was in early days. Nature cherishes her own, a jealous mother, and in these quiet hills of Galilee her hand works lovingly. The garden, when the dawn breaks gently, gleams with the jeweled glory of the dew. When twilight falls and the birds which all day long have fluttered in tree and copse are quiet, and the doves whose busy wings have fluttered whitely in the sunshine seek their nests harmoniously, it is a peaceful place, sequestered.

So few changes have come to the life of this part of Palestine in 2,000 years that it is not hard to pierce the misty veil of time and realize as in a vision how this garden looked when Mary used to go there with her little son, a happy mother for whom the future held no fears.

Built on the sides of two hills, the town itself has a charm all its own, made up not alone of pious associations but as well of the beauty of orchards, cultivated fields and gardens. As seen from the high road which leads thither from the sea through the wide, fair plain of Esdraelon it is a friendly-looking place.

Its houses, red and white, stretch up to the top of the hill from the steep declivity in which the town is placed, and gardens and orchards are interspersed and add color to the scene, relieving that bleakness of plain walls which look so bare in heat of southern sun.

Though not so large as Jerusalem, smaller even than Bethlehem, the town wears an air of distinction, a cheerful atmosphere of hospitality which wins it a fond place in a weary traveler's regard.

To this quiet city of Galilee Mary came as a bride from the hilltop town of Sepphoris. Tradition tells how young she was, how beautiful her dark and oval face appeared, how tiny were her hands and feet. She had traveled quite a little in her short life.

For once a year she went on foot with Anna and Joachim to Carmel, where they owned some land on the outskirts of Galilee. That mountain, which overlooks St. John of Acre, we are told, she loved especially, for there she could scan both sky and sea and watch the clouds like angels' garments trailing delicately across the fields of blue.

From this humble home in Nazareth she fled with her child in her arms, following Joseph to far Egypt, there to live in exile until it was safe once more to return to the land of her birth.

How dear to her dreams seemed then to her the mountains of Gilboa, snow capped, the Kishon, the Kishon's stormy stream, and the fragrant, pathless fields of Esdraelon, where a thousand eyes of daisies stare widely at the oriental sky, where breezes sway the yellow celandines amid the grasses, where tiny violets clothe the hillside modestly with bloom. Back to their garden at Nazareth came at last the holy family, and in the little house adjoining they lived all through the boyhood of Jesus. In this pleasant spot Mary often sat, her child at her knee, and dreamed long thoughts of tender motherhood.

By this path she led her little boy to Joseph's workshop, where he would learn the trade of carpentry. Here she was happy. Here she was young. Not yet into her loving heart had come the fear of her son's great destiny.

Just a little beyond the town of Nazareth, about 500 yards from where Mary's house stood, on its borders, and at this later day close to the Church of the Annunciation, is the historic well, approached by a path long and stony, where Mary came for water for her household. Below the fountain is a pool where she washed her garments and household linen.

Today at evening, when coolness has descended from the hills and tempered the heat in the valley round about, the women of Nazareth come down the stony pathways from the town to fill their jars with water at this fountain.

Swiftly and softly the women come and go. With practiced movement they take the amphoras from their heads, fill them at the fountain, and lift them once more to poise them either on head or hip. Every attitude is strong and easy.

Their garments, the dark blue or red skirt of Galilee, corded in at the waist, the protecting cloak which covers them almost entirely, coming even over the forehead, hang gracefully in long straight folds.

Mary must have dressed like these women when she came to the flowing well. Her little feet that history tells about with such insistent emphasis were, like theirs, unclothed. Her little hands were strong, like theirs, to lift the heavy amphora high. With flexibility of youth she mounted the rocky slope to where her house stood. Many times, no doubt, she fed the infant Jesus with her holding fast his hand. The pool beneath the fountain, where the women wash their clothes, reflected often her earnest brow.

KIDNEYS CLOG UP FROM EATING TOO MUCH MEAT

Take Tablespoonful of Salts If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts: take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning, and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

HUSBAND SPENT EVERYTHING

In an Effort to Bring Wife's Troubles to End, and Finally Succeeds.

Myra, Ky.—Mrs. Sarah Branham, of this town, gives out the following statement for publication: "I am 37 years of age, and suffered untold agony with womanly troubles for 11 years. For 7 years, I was all run down, and was told that I could not live. My husband spent everything he had, but I got only temporary relief.

A merchant recommended Cardul, the woman's tonic, to my husband, and he got me 3 bottles at one time. I began taking it, and before the first bottle was gone, I began to feel better. I took all of the 6 bottles, and I am today as sound and well as any woman, and fat and hearty."

Such testimony as the above, which is given unsolicited, speaks for itself. Can't you see, lady reader, that you are doing yourself, your family, your friends, an injustice by not, at least, trying Cardul, if you suffer from any of the many ailments so common to women?

Cardul is composed of pure, harmless, vegetable ingredients, which act in a gentle, natural way on the weakened womanly organs, helping build them back to permanent strength and health.

Cardul has helped thousands of other women. Why not you? Ask your druggist. He knows about Cardul.

The Last Season

FAIRVIEW STOCK FARM IN CALLOWAY CO.

Fairview Stock Farm offers for the breeding season of 1914 the most tempting and enticing inducements that have ever been offered to the breeding public. A general cut-throat reduction for the services of the greatest breeders that have ever blessed this section of the country, has been made.

Sprague Patch an excellent individual, sired by the world's Champion Pacer, has been most shamefully reduced to the low price of $30.00.

Braden Gentry a most wonderful horse, that contains all the qualities of his famous sire, John R. Gentry, has the pitiful sum of $20 attached for his services.

The Algerian a phenomenal trotter, a race track fiend, and like his sire, The Bondsman, is one of the greatest breeders that has ever been brought into this country. He suffers the same humiliation as Gentry and will make the season for $20.00.

Napoleon the Champion Mammoth Jack of Kentucky, who has never met his Waterloo; and the Handsome Black, Jack, CARMACK, by a famous imported sire, will both make the season at $12.00, and never has the services of such fine blood ever been offered at such low prices. It is ridiculous, we admit.

This is absolutely the last season of this barn of stock, as they will be on the market at the close of this season.

Mr. Breeder, this is your last chance at this fine barn of stock. They will be elsewhere next season. Lovers of fine stock should grasp this last golden opportunity of a life time.

We wish to thank our friends and patrons for their patronage of the past seasons and we cordially invite them to take advantage of this present and last season of Fairview Stock Farm.

FAVORITE COOK, by old Captain Cook, and one of the best horses in the county, can be purchased now at a very low price.
